

30th Ave. E

Concept B

This concept provides a less formal arrangement of similar functions and spaces. An accessible graded walk tightly traverses the eastern slope and gently arcs across the western slope. The two routes meet at an apparent (dry) waterfall, where the walk and intermittent water from the south end of the site appears to cascade over stones into the dry 'creek' heading north. A gravel walk with natural stone boulders creates this 'creek'-bed. Wet-tolerant grassy perennials (iris, etc.) line the 'creek'. At the south and north end of the space the basin is curved. Stones in the south end provide informal terracing and seating. These stones help form a series of steps into the basin from the southeast corner. At the north end of the park the existing grassed access route is partially paved to provide a fast route into the basin. There is a small plaza at the southwest corner for seating/tables.
